Set the scene for romantic at home dining with The Last Detail

Creating a romantic setting for a Valentine's Day meal or proposal is easy with The Last Detail, one of the UK's leading suppliers of colour-coordinated table decorations, party products and wedding favours.

Instead of spending a fortune on fancy restaurants, The Last Detail has a wide selection of products available that can help create a romantic ambience at home without costing the earth.

Choose from a plethora of heart-shaped products such as red miniature chocolate hearts, metallic red table confetti, gift boxes or sparklers ideal as a stunning finale to any romantic meal.

For those who prefer understated romantic touches, real rose petals in colours such as raspberry red or burgundy are ideal for sprinkling over tables as are dusky pink baby dried rose buds or soft red feathers.

Customers can shop by products or by colour making shopping for red or pink Valentine's Day items easier than ever. Visit www.thelastdetail.co.uk to see the full range of products.

Kaley Gardiner, the founder of The Last Detail, believes that creating a meal for two at home can be the ultimate romantic gesture if time is taken to add special personal touches to the occasion. She shares her top tips on creating the perfect at home dining experience:

1. Set the ambience. Ensure that you will not be disturbed and choose an intimate, cosy room for your meal coupled with some appropriate romantic music.
2. Choose simple and easy to cook food. Oysters may be rumoured to be one of the ultimate aphrodisiacs but preparing them is not so simple! Stick to something you know or consider ordering in some gourmet ready meals. Meals that you can share such as fondue are also a good option.
3. For a romantic table setting scatter red rose petals round the base of a candle in the middle of your table. Add some red or iridescent hearts confetti if you like a little more detail but make sure you use most colour in the centre of the table so there is a natural focal point. As you move outwards towards the edge of the table use fewer decorations to provide more subtle accents of colour.

4. Lay a red feather on each napkin or tie red organza ribbon into a lavish bow. Choose classic white table linen and tableware to offset the colour of the decorations.
5. Finally, serve pudding with a heart-shaped sparkler or present your sweetheart with a heart-shaped box full of miniature heart-shaped chocolates or jewellery!

And don't forget, if you are planning to propose on Valentine's night, why not go a step further, laying a trail of rose petals to the bedroom door and on the bed too woo your fiancé?
